A 1-horsepower shop vacuum sucks the cotton and seeds through the window screen—coarser debris remains behind. Inside the vacuum, the cotton adheres to the cloth filter and the seeds and minor debris collect in the bottom of the canister. When the seedlot is finished, we simply pour the seeds into a zip-lock-type bag and keep them refrigerated for a few days until they are sown.

REFERENCES

